Berridge had frequently stated that he had no money and that he entered into the deal with the understanding that Williur, who had been highly ecommended to him in Albuquerque, was to furnish all the ready money necessary to work the mine; and while swaiting upon Wilbur's actions back in Kansas, Berreige scemed much worried, and one day while speaking of the affair to the writer of this item said that "the outcome of affairs and the actions of Wilbur was nearly driving him crazy." Not receiving any satisfaction from Wilbur, Berrylge went to Hillshore about the 1st f October where he remained until recently lieth Berraige and Wilbur left behind them unpaid board bills, but it seems evident that the former was not so much to blame for his unpaid debts as some might suppose. Sections 1921 and 1922 are, it is arged by counsel in line with section 1878, but seems to me that with more reason can it be said that they are to be construed with sections 1914 and 1915, for they cover the same things in terms, and they do not appear to touch verified accounts emraced in section 1878. We have legislative construction in the act of 1889, to the flect that sections 1921 and 1922 do not refer to verified accounts.

In none of the arguments advanced has any consideration been paid to the words "not barred by the provisions of this act" found in section 1878, but it must be supposed hat there was a purpose in inser

It cannot be contended that the rules of pleading were so changed by this see non as to make it no longer unnecessary for lefendants to plead the statute of limitations, if that was relied on as a defense and yet if the section is enacted to prescribe what shall be sufficient evidenbrother-in-law of John Ward, also ar- on a trial, does it not f diew that, whether rested for this robbery.
